I see that people are against opioids and there are no studies that has a reason why there not accepted. They can't do that study because they don't have the answer as to what fibromyalgia is, just conjecture. I am 71 yrs old and have lots of experience; FM runs in my family.	5/12/2016 8:21 AM

103	How there are other conditions not separated out link CMPD. I have FM dx but all meds for FM as CNS psychological illness don't work. Cymbalta and Savella made pain worse as my heart rate skyrockets. FM is different from chronic myofascial pain and dysfunction. (See Travell and Simons initial work, now Devin Starlynal and others). I have a FM dx but it doesn't fit. CMPD MUST be separated. I have a doctor who doesn't acknowledge the difference but treats the differences. I have PT who acknowledges and treats the difference through dry needling. If didn't, I'd be hopeless. SO many people only get the FM dx (which is still somewhat wastebasket dx and treated as psychological). I was nowhere near depressed when I started getting the pain. Years of pain can cause depression and this needs to be recognized, not the other way around. Of, course I'm going to get unhappy when years of pain aren't addressed, stigmatized and take away a life. It's not always depression first. Primarily, though CMPD must be acknowledged, separated from FM and treatment taught in basic medical education.	5/12/2016 5:19 AM
